

Kingfell at a glance

Kingfell delivers specialist fire engineering and risk management services. We are renowned for tailor-made, innovative solutions that protect our clients' businesses, assets and operations, helping them to protect the lives and welfare of their employees and visitors. We are independent of any system vendors and equipment suppliers and as such are free to offer the best, compliant solution at the least cost.

Our clients span both public and private sector organisations, especially transport, infrastructure and utilities, property development, facilities management and construction.

What connects our clients is their responsibility for large numbers of people, as well as an extremely low tolerance of disruption of their normal operations. Any interruption will have significant consequences, impacting many more than those directly affected.

What we do

Fire engineering

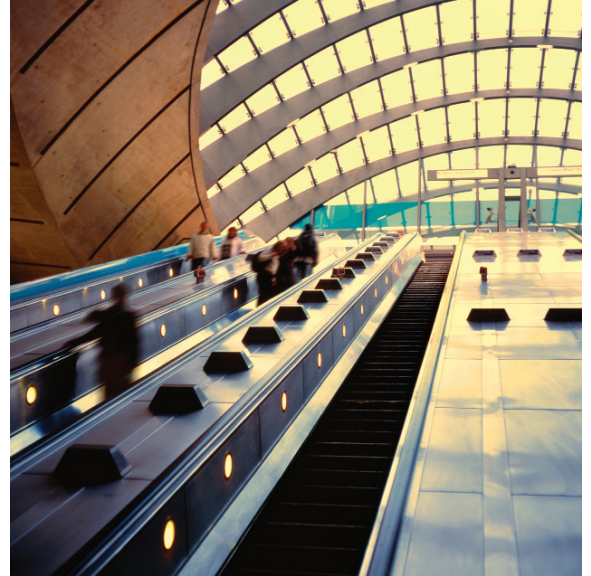

- Surveys of all types of fire detection and protection systems
- Design, installation, commissioning and certification
- System proving, development, modification and enhancement
- Routine and preventative maintenance
- 24/7 emergency response within two hours of a call
- Risk assessments to maintain compliance and operational efficiency.

Consultancy

- Advice on the application of current and proposed requirements
- Development of tailored, cost effective fire strategies
- Design and engineering of fire detection and protection systems
- Fire and evacuation modelling – with both 2D and 3D visualisations
- Quantitative and qualitative fire risk assessment and risk mitigation
- Project supervision, contract management, training and documentation
- Managed stakeholder consultation, contract management and training.

Risk management

- Risk assessment – a quantitative and qualitative assessment methods
- Risk management – seeing how these impacts can be controlled
- Development and implementation of Asset Stewardship and other risk-based Business Continuity management methods
- Help with security and emergency planning and crisis response
- Delivering risk management solutions with – 'InterAct'.

Fire engineering and risk management specialists

How you benefit

Kingfell offers a complete solution to fire safety and risk management. Our wide range of clients shows that we are big enough to attract prestigious organisations but not so big that we stop listening. We are particularly proud of the levels of repeat business we achieve, where our clients tell us that they value:

Strength and depth

With many years' experience of fire protection and risk management of varying complexity and in many different and unusual situations, Kingfell is home to some of the UK's leading fire experts. This strength of capability and depth of experience means that you have access to people who will understand the issues you face and will engineer the best and most cost effective solution to your particular requirements.

Expertise

Kingfell is synonymous with 'Fire Strategies', the best practice approach to fire systems design that was the subject of the first British Standard – PAS 911, published in 2007. Kingfell wrote this Specification that now provides the framework for the development of fire strategies for new and existing buildings. Our clients are assured full compliance with the UK fire standards, as well as the latest thinking on fire strategy development.

Independent, unbiased advice

Impartiality is a key attribute of our service and we have taken the deliberate step of remaining independent. We invest considerable time into understanding the equipment on the market, so that our recommendations are based on what is right for your organisation's unique requirements rather than what might earn us most favour with a supplier.

'Business as usual'

Our solutions are timely and practical, and at their core is an understanding of how much disruptions to your operations can cost. We have international reach, with roots in central London, and are happy working with clients within and increasingly outside the UK. This means that we are able to undertake work on your behalf wherever you are, ensuring there is a consistent approach to fire safety across your business, regardless of location.

Client service

As a client of Kingfell you are allocated an account director who is responsible for understanding your needs and making sure you are fully satisfied with everything we do for you. A named senior level resource will manage the delivery of our service to you and maintain regular communication with you, providing progress updates, requesting feedback along the way, and making appropriate adjustments so that your expectations are met. We provide you with a single point of contact, whether we are working with you within the UK or overseas. This guarantees continuity of service and access to someone who understands your project with the authority to make decisions.

